Christen Cromwell

Two Strikes Theatre Collective, July 2019 to present
She, Her, Hers

Christen Cromwell is an educator and theatre artist born and raised in Baltimore, MD. Pursuing a further education in theatre became essential after her time at Baltimore City College, which eventually led her to many theatrical collaborations on The Johns Hopkins University campus. After graduating from Hopkins and becoming increasingly passionate about equity in education, she earned her MAT in Secondary English and Theatre Education in 2013. Her resume includes many acting, directing, and writing credits in theatre and film, primarily comedy. She currently teaches secondary English and Theater for Baltimore County Public Schools. Cromwell is also a founding board member of and Director of Play Development for Two Strikes Theatre Collective, an organization whose mission is to prioritize Black women's stories.
